CARES fund disbursement methodology

CARES disbursements were all done through a pass-through account directly to the student. All students who successfully completed their FAFSA and all Federal Title IV requirements received awards. Students with the highest financial need as determined by the Federal Methodology received higher awards. All disbursements were weighted by the number of credits taken.

CRRSAA and ARP fund disbursement methodology

CRRSAA and APRP were done with two differing methods. First, we disbursed funds through a pass-through account directly to the student. All students who successfully completed their FAFSA and all Federal Title IV requirements received awards. Students with the highest financial need as determined by the Federal Methodology received higher awards. All disbursements were weighted by the number of credits taken.

The second type of funding was done through a program created by the college called the Student Relief Fund. An E-Form was created and posted inside the school portal. All eligible students were informed of the program and asked to complete the form if they needed assistance with any of the allowable costs designated by the HEERF funding. A resource allocation person was hired to validate financial need and to determine eligibility for each request.
