Recovery services strengthen communities by helping people overcome substance use disorders, improve their health, and rebuild stable, productive lives.

The Recovery Specialist is an individual with personal, lived experience of their own recovery. By offering insight into the recovery process based on their own experience, recovery specialists are able to provide a unique perspective while providing recovery support services.

Specialists help to create healthier, more resilient communities where individuals and families can thrive.

Designed by the Pennsylvania Certification Board (PCB), this program meets the education requirements for certification (Certified Recovery Specialist and/or Certified Family Recovery Specialist) in this specialized behavioral health field, and prepares students to take certification exams and enter or re-enter the job market.
